MastrandreaMichaelD.Mastrandrea,andKristinKuntz-Duriseti,Eds. We will need international negotiations and bargaining to help the developing world leapfrog the traditional technologies of growing economies—like massive coal burning or dramatic increases in individual car use. Michael D. According to this paradigm, further scientific research into the interacting processes of the climate system can reduce uncertainty about how the system will respond to increasing concentrations of greenhouse gases.

You might have noticed the absence of paywalls at Boston Review. Avoiding severe impacts also will require long-term planning, such as investments in durable infrastructure in coastal zones or habitat protection for threatened or endangered species. The burning of fossil fuels is the greatest contributor of greenhouse gases, but agricultural practices, deforestation, and cement production also play a role.
